Counselor Tamika Lewis says she founded WOC Therapy, which helps match women of color with therapists, as a response to the need of more therapists of color. Like Boateng, Lewis says it can be exhausting to deal with the daily challenges that come with being a woman of color, and then having to explain these nuances to a therapist.

My Therapist Says to Color: Ignore Reality and Color

I say something to the point of, "I know that I can never really know what it feels like to be a Person of Color in this world; it's my hope that our time together will feel safe enough for you to talk about it with me." It's not very eloquent, but I think it makes space for different realities to be in the office together.
